The Value of Pain
What not to Say . . .

• They are in a better place
• Get over it/move on
• It was for the best
• You just need a distraction
• It just takes time
• At least you have other children
• Be grateful that
  _____________
• At least they aren’t suffering
• Stop living in the past
• Just keep smiling
• She wouldn’t want you to grieve
• Look on the bright side
• Is there anything I can do?
• Call me if you need anything
• I know how you feel
• I’m so sorry
What to Say . . .

• I am so sorry that you are going through this right now.
• Please tell me something about your ________________.
• I’m going to be by to visit you. What time would be best?
• Your sadness or pain doesn’t frighten me. I’m listening.
• I don’t have any idea of what this is like for you. Please tell me more.
• Do you need me just to sit in silence with you?
• Would you like a tissue?
• Your_______ was really special. I remember _________________.
• He suffered through a lot, didn’t he?
• Who is your best support right now?
• It’s hard to say “good-bye” isn’t it?
Supportive Listening

“The friend that can be silent with us in our moment of confusion or despair, who can stay with us in our hour of grief and bereavement, who can tolerate not knowing . . . Not healing. . . Not curing. . . That is a friend indeed.”

~ Henri Nouwen
Gain Confidence when Feeling Awkward
